

SGEA Presenter – Alexandria Marshall, Medical Student

Alexandria Marshall is about to start her second year of medical school at Wake Forest School of Medicine. She graduated from Northwestern University with a BA in neuroscience and French studies. Her interests included neurology, ophthalmology, anesthesiology, and medical education. She is currently conducting research into the social determinants of health in glioma patients and improving first year medical student's neuroanatomy performance. Outside of medical school, Alexandria enjoys reading, running, tennis, and doing the New York Times Crossword.
