

Amy N. Hildreth, M.D., F.A.C.S.

Dr. Amy Hildreth is Associate Professor of Surgery at Wake Forest School of Medicine and the Director of the General Surgery Residency Program. She attended the University of Georgia and then received her M.D. from the University of South Carolina School of Medicine. She then completed a residency in General Surgery and fellowship in Surgical Critical Care at the University of Tennessee College of Medicine- Chattanooga. In 2008, following her postgraduate training, Dr. Hildreth joined the faculty at Wake Forest School of Medicine. Her clinical practice is in Acute Care Surgery, encompassing Trauma Surgery, Emergency General Surgery, and Surgical Critical Care. Her research interests include a variety of clinical topics within emergency surgery and surgical critical care as well as surgical education and global surgery. Dr. Hildreth is active in a variety of regional and national organizations. She serves as one of two Wake Forest faculty representatives to the Association of American Medical College's Council on Faculty and Academic Societies (CFAS), where she is a member of the administrative board and chair of the communications committee. She is also a participant in the National Academy of Medicine's Action Collaborative on Clinician Well-Being and Resilience.